First, get it spelled correctly...

There is no e following the g in the U.S. English spelling of acknowledgment

(Don’t believe me?—look at the acknowledgment page of any book published by a U.S. publisher).

British English spells it with the “e,” but we colonials have our own rules.

Some wimpy dictionaries may accord “acknowledgement” alternative status, but we have higher standards in PHYS 499
The acknowledgment is a formal printed statement that recognizes individuals and institutions that contributed to the work being reported.

Contributions to the research should be acknowledged.

Non-research contributions are generally not appropriate for acknowledgment in a scientific paper but may be in a thesis.

Acknowledge research contributions by people other than the authors:

- Persons who gave scientific guidance, participated in discussions, or shared unpublished results.
- Persons who provided samples or equipment.
- Assistants or students who helped do the work.
- Technicians at user facilities or labs.

The acknowledgment should be a simple statement of thanks, not a testimonial or dedication.
Do not acknowledge non-science contributors

Persons who helped prepare the manuscript (e.g., typists, graphic artists)

Persons who provided encouragement or moral support (e.g., Mom)

Persons who provided non-technical services (e.g., grant coordinators, secretaries, purchasing agents)

These individuals might be acknowledged in a thesis, but not in a journal article, presentation, or poster

Acknowledge by name only

Do not use titles, honorifics, positions, or awards

Paul G. Kwiat
NOT
Professor Paul G. Kwiat, Bardeen Chair in Physics

Anthony J. Leggett
NOT
Sir Dr. A.J. Leggett, Nobel Laureate
Always acknowledge financial support of the research—always

Give the name of the funding agency and grant or contract number
Do not mention any title that came with the funds

A.C. acknowledges support from the Lorella Jones Summer Research Fund
NOT
A.C. was a Lorella Jones Summer Research Fellow

Funding agency acknowledgments

An acknowledgment of NSF support and a disclaimer must appear in publications (including World Wide Web sites) of any material, whether copyrighted or not, based on or developed under NSF-supported projects:

"This material is based upon work supported by the National Science Foundation under Grant No. ____."

In the case of multiple grants, it may be permissible to name only the funding agency
NSF support also must be orally acknowledged during all news media interviews, including popular media such as radio, television and news magazines

Except for articles or papers published in scientific, technical or professional journals, the following disclaimer must be included:

“Any opinions, findings, and conclusions or recommendations expressed in this material are those of the author(s) and do not necessarily reflect the views of the National Science Foundation.”

What about logos?

Federal funding agencies may allow you to use their logos, but obtain a high-resolution image and follow their guidelines

The University has explicit rules about the use of the I-mark

Companies are aggressive about protecting their brands and trademarks; just because you can grab a logo off a website does not mean you can use it with impunity
What about logos?

The U.S. Department of Energy says you may NOT use their logo without explicit permission
